Library Databases

Library databases provide you with access on campus and at home to eBooks and journal articles that you can cite in papers.

To start searching the databases, go to www.uaccm.edu and click on the “Academic Commons” link in the upper center of the page.

On the Academic Common’s page, hover over the “Find” tab and click on “Databases” to access an A-Z list of our databases with descriptions.

The “Databases by Subject” link groups the library’s databases into different subject areas that correspond with your class topics. For example: if you are working on a paper for your history class, you can see a list of databases where you can quickly find eBooks and journal articles about history topics.

When using the library’s databases off campus, the description next to each database will tell you what you need for off campus use. Before using the databases from off campus, you will need a library barcode number. This is a 14 digit number that starts with a number 2 on the back of your UACCM ID. If you have not already been issued a library barcode to check out library books or DVD’s, come by the library to receive one.

Some of our databases are provided through a state funded program called the Arkansas Traveler Databases Project. Arkansas Traveler Databases are free for use by all Arkansas residents. Off campus access will require you to input an Arkansas city, zip code, and phone number. You can enter the UACCM Library’s information: Morrilton, 72110, 501-977-2092.

Need help? Want to learn our tricks for finding the information you need quicker? Come by the library. You can also email the library at library@uaccm.edu or call us at 501-977-2092.
